ASHEBORO – On Saturday, the Asheboro City Board of Education met for their winter retreat in the Professional Development Center, located on the campus of Asheboro High School. During the meeting, the board members from members of Smith Sinnett, the architecture group who has been instrumental in the planning and development phases of the Asheboro High School renovation and expansion project.

“We’re extremely pleased with the work that’s being done behind the scenes to make the renovation, repair, and expansion project at Asheboro High School a reality,” said Dr. Terry W. Worrell, Superintendent for Asheboro City Schools. “Our team has worked tirelessly with the architects at Smith Sinnett and the Randolph County Commissioners to create a solution that will meet the needs of our growing student body at Asheboro High School. A rendering of the proposal will be available for the community to view tomorrow night at the State of Our Schools event. This opportunity allows us to continue our rich tradition of excellence by preserving the original Asheboro High School building and to add a state-of-the-art addition that will continue to serve students for many years to come,” she added.

The new addition will include a multi-use commons space, approximately 18 classrooms for a number of subject areas, an expanded band area to foster growth in the performing arts program, and a few landscaped courtyard spaces for students to study and work in groups. “The new addition promises to offer easy accessibility, multi-use areas, and new classrooms to support the number of innovative programs at Asheboro High School,” said Dr. Worrell.

The project will be ready to begin in the summer of 2018.
