CREATING A CULTURE OF USING DATA

Data is a powerful tool in the ever-evolving quest to do what is best for students, but creating a data-rich culture doesn't need to be cumbersome or scary. With the knowledge that data points extend beyond state test scores, and because the teacher-principal relationship must be one of collaborative trust, data should together be embraced by teachers and administrators. This session will help set the foundation for creating a culture of using data in your district. Facilitated by Josh Clark, NWOESC Education Consultant, and Kris Dobbelaere, NWOESC Director of Curriculum, Instruction & Professional Development.

Value Added 101

September 25 8:30 AM–11:30 AM
